

Capitol Connection Q&A for Contractors
By Shauna Krause, President, Capitol Services, Inc.

If you are a contractor, I can help you and sometimes the answer is 'fast', other times they are just 'hard'. Something different for a 'change', and a contractor looking for a special 'agent' wraps it up...

Q: I am interested in applying for a General Building ("B") license, but I am unsure whether I will qualify or not. I went to a technical school for HVAC training back in 1993 and since then I have been doing general maintenance construction work including some remodels. All of this has been done on a referral basis. I've done a lot of painting, floor installs, and even many paver installations. I can document my work history with pictures/images, and I have many references who can vouch for my experience. Do you have any advice as to whether I would be approved to sit for the exam?

A: I am not in the position to give you a hard and fast "yes" or "no" answer, however I can tell you that based on what you've described, it will be difficult to get approved. As you may be aware, the CSLB requires that you document at least four years of fulltime work experience in the trade you are applying for within the last ten years. That being said, any training from more than ten years ago will not be considered.

Also, the CSLB does not accept photos/images as a form of verifiable experience. For the "B" classification, your fulltime work experience needs to include Framing and at least two unrelated trades. It sounds like you have the two unrelated trades (Flooring and Painting), but you didn't mention Framing. You can feel free to give me a call anytime to further discuss your experience and the likelihood of success.

Q: I am an attorney and I have a client who is looking to sell their business which is currently a Corporation. The buyer intends to convert to a Limited Liability Company (LLC) and transfer the license number. From the research I've done, both from your articles online at cutredtape.com as well as the CSLB website, I understand the personnel of the current Corporation and the new LLC all need to be the same on both entities in order to accomplish this. If the Managers/Members of the new LLC change shortly after the license number is transferred, is that acceptable? In other words, does the requirement for having the same personnel need to be indefinite? If the answer is no, how do we notify the CSLB and when?

A: The personnel of the original Corporate license does not have to indefinitely match the personnel of the LLC. Once the license number is transferred, you can update the personnel at any time. Once updated with the Secretary of State, you have 90 days to notify the CSLB of the change.

Q: You helped me obtain my Sole Proprietor license last year. I'm going to incorporate and transfer my number. I was wondering if your company provides Registered Agent services, or can I be my own Registered Agent?

A: We do offer Registered Agent services so please contact me if you'd like to get that set up. You can act as your own Registered Agent as long as you have a California address.

REPORTING WORK RELATED INJURY AND ILLNESS

INTRODUCTION

Even with all the safe work practices and training available in the workplace, injuries and illnesses still happen. When an injury or illness happens, an employee needs to report it to their supervisor immediately or as soon as possible if circumstances prevent the employee from reporting it immediately.

TYPES OF INJUIRES AND ILLNESSES THAT NEED TO BE REPORTED

When an employee is hurt or gets sick in their line of work, no matter how minor, they should report it immediately to their supervisor or designated person under their company's policy. Examples of injuries and illness that should be reported include:

Injuries

- Any minor injury that requires a band aid
 - This is due to the threat of cuts getting infected or any other types of exposure to bloodborne pathogens.
- Biological exposures such as needle sticks or any other contact made with blood or other bodily fluids
- Severe lacerations or punctures that require stitches
- Sprains
- Broken bones
- Amputations
- Injuries involving hospital treatment, ambulance transport or time away from work
- Injuries resulting from the exposure to chemicals

Illness

- Chemical poisoning
- Temperature related illness
- Noise-Induced Hearing Loss (NIHL)
- Occupational Dermatitis
- Occupational Asthma
- Musculoskeletal Disorders (MSD)

Note: Due to the nature of illnesses, it may take some time for symptoms to appear. Symptoms and a diagnosis should be reported as soon as possible.

Note: Employees should not self-diagnosis. If an employee starts to experience symptoms associated with an illness and they feel that it is work related, they should seek professional medical assistance.

REPORTING WORK RELATED INJURY AND ILLNESS

HOW TO REPORT

Employees should always follow their company's specific procedures for reporting injuries and illnesses that occur at work. Injuries and illnesses should be reported immediately or as soon as possible.

When reporting an injury or illness, an employee should do the following:

- Report the injury or symptoms immediately (or as soon as possible if you are seeking medical treatment) to your supervisor or designated person.
- Give details about the injury or symptoms. Details include:
 - o Date
 - o Time
 - o Description of the work area and activities being performed
 - o The names of eyewitnesses or coworkers who aided the employee
 - o Symptoms (if applicable)Note: If possible, give an estimated time of when symptoms first appeared.
- Fill out any forms that relate to the reporting of a work-related injury or illness.
 - o Depending on the situation, your employer may give you a form for your medical provider or other medical professional to fill out. Return this form as soon as possible to your supervisor or designated person.
- Keep your supervisor or designated person up-to-date on any ongoing medical treatment or accommodations that you are receiving or will need.

DO NOT DELAY TREATMENT

Do not delay seeking treatment to report an injury or illness. If medical treatment is needed immediately, you should get treated and then report the injury or illness.

DO NOT HESITATE TO REPORT AN INJURY OR ILLNESS

Employees should not hesitate to report an injury or illness. Employers cannot retaliate against an employee for reporting a work-related injury or illness.

FALSE REPORTING

It is a crime for an employee to knowingly file a fraudulent workers' compensation claim. Any person who files a false workers' compensation claim is guilty of a crime and may be subject to criminal charges which may be punishable by up to (5) years in prison and/or a fine of up to $150,000.

CONCLUSION

When an injury or illness occurs at the workplace, an employee needs to report it. Even a minor injury should be reported. Some employees may think that minor things, such as a paper cut, do not need to be reported; after all they can just put a band aid on it and return to work. However, employees need to remember that even paper cuts can get infected. Both you and your supervisor want you to be able to work and part of that includes getting injuries and illnesses treated and reported.
