What's old isn't always re-'new'-able but there is a solution! A patient father asks for an assist with a very determined, but so far unsuccessful, license applicant. There is one place a competitive complaint from a licensed contractor will get some SWIFT action...

Q: Your company helped me get my license 12-15 years ago. I have had a few issues since then, which are non-license related, but my license has now expired. I'm having a difficult time trying to renew online and it seems the local offices are closed. I know it's been over 5 years, but I was hoping there is some simple resolution to correct this issue. Can you help with this?

A: Thank you for contacting us again. I looked up your license and yes, it's been expired for over five years so you cannot renew it. You will have to re-apply and re-test, but since it's a Sole Owner license you can request the number to be re-issued to you again. Yes, we can help so please let me know if you want our assistance again.

Q: My Son applied for a Contractor's license and his application has been rejected multiple times. He has tried to provide the corrections they are requesting several times, but the CSLB just doesn't seem to be satisfied with his work experience. He has worked for Contractors for the last ten years, but not as an actual employee, just more an "as needed" basis. It is my understanding he can hire an employee to fulfill the role as an RME, but if he does that, how long does he need to employ this individual before he can take over the license?

A: In order to qualify the license, he will need to document at least four years of experience in the Trade he is applying for. If he currently has zero experience which is verifiable, then he would need to wait four years from the time the license is issued (assuming he's actively involved in the Trade duties for the four years). If he has previous experience that can be verified, the amount of time he would need to wait can be adjusted accordingly.

Q: We are applying for a new license for our Corporation. Our RMO qualifies another license, so we are going to give him 20% ownership in our company. For his Officer title, is "Director" an acceptable title?

A: Yes, the CSLB accepts "Director" as an Officer title.

Q: I am attorney who has used your services in the past and I have another matter for you, or at least seeking your advice. It involves a Contractor that is misclassifying employees for prevailing wage purposes and underpaying them. Because the Contractor is underpaying employees, it is able to bid lower on jobs than my client, which is a competitor. The Contractor is also misclassifying employees for purposes of Workers Compensation insurance, so it is engaging in a series of wrongdoings that I believe warrant an investigation. How do you suggest I proceed?

A: My suggestion is to start with filing a complaint with the CSLB. You can find information on the complaint process on the CSLB's website, or feel free to call our office. These types of improper activities are definitely high on the CSLB's priority list!

While knowledge is power, knowing where to go for the answers is half the battle. INTRODUCTION

Portable generators are internal combustion engines used to produce electricity and are useful to provide remote power to tools and appliances. Generators are a relatively safe piece of equipment as long as they are used properly but there are many potential hazards if they are not.

POTENTIAL HAZARDS

- Shock or electrocution
- Carbon monoxide from the exhaust
- Noise and vibration hazards
- Fires may occur because of:
 - Not dispensing fuel properly
 - Improper storage

PRIOR TO USE

- All guards and shields should be in their proper place and in good working order.
- Oil levels should be checked before use.
- Generator should be stored in a clean and dry area.
- A ground wire should be attached to assure the generator is properly grounded.
- Do not use generator with wet hands.
- Fresh gasoline should be used.
- If generator may sit for a long time, a gas stabilizer should be used.

GENERATOR SAFETY

SAFE WORK PRACTICES

- The generator should not be operated in an enclosed space.
- Frayed or defective extension should not be used.
- The generator should not be used in the rain or snow, use an overhang or in portable shelter if possible.
- Gasoline should not be added to a running generator and be sure, to:
 - Shut down the generator and let it cool before adding fuel or performing maintenance.
 - Store and transport fuel in approved containers.

- Appliances and tools should be plugged in directly to the generator, unless:
 - An outdoor rated extension cord with ample watts or amps in used.
- If the generator is going to sit for long periods of time it is good to periodically start it up and let it run for a few minutes.

CONCLUSION

Portable generators are commonly used and provide necessary power to many jobsites. They are safe to use for the most part, but can be dangerous if used incorrectly. Following company policy and these safe work practices should help to ensure employee safety, while using a portable generator.
