

Capitol Connection Q&A for Contractors
By Shauna Krause, President, Capitol Services, Inc.

We start with an 'either, or' question, get some 'props' from a contractor couple and go over the border to save another some bucks! Don't question yourself, lean on a friend or believe in rumor when you can get expert answers to your contractor licensing questions for CA, NV and AZ every time you contact me...

Q: Our Qualifier was let go from the Company yesterday and we want to have one of our other employees replace him on the license. The other employee has his own license however he is not listed as an Officer of our company. Does that mean he needs to be an RME instead of an RMO? I'm just wondering because he is concerned about the "hour" requirement for RME's.

A: That is correct. If he is not an Officer of the company, he will be an RME (Responsible Managing Employee). Therefore, he will be required to Inactivate his own license, and he will be required to work at least 32 hours a week, or 80% of the Company's operating time.

Q: My husband is a Contractor and he and I read the articles you supply for the weekly bulletin we receive. My husband wanted me to reach out to you to explain his current situation and ask a few questions. He is a Sole Proprietor using a fictitious business name, which is what shows up on the CSLB's website. We live in a small rural area, and with the COVID-19 situation, he started advertising as a Handyman business, which is not reflected on his license. First question is, does the CSLB need to list all three names – his name, and both fictitious business names? Number two, what business name would he use in his advertisements? Lastly, he is thinking of Incorporating. Does he have to get a new license or can he keep his current license?

A: Thank you for contacting Capitol Services Inc. and thank you for reading the weekly columns. Your husband cannot have multiple "dba" attached to the same license. Since he is a Sole Proprietor, he is listed as the sole owner, and he can name the business anything he wants (as long as doesn't imply he is performing work outside of the scope he is permitted with the classification he holds). If he wants to operate under two different business names as sole proprietor, he would need to obtain a second license number for the second "dba". As far as advertisements, he needs to advertise under the business name exactly as listed on the Contractor's License. If he decides to Incorporate, he has to complete an application as if it's a new license, but if he owns at least 51% of the corporation, he has the option to transfer the license number to the Corporation, or obtain a new license number. Thanks again, let us know anytime we can assist.

Q: We are in the final stages of obtaining our Contractor's License in Nevada. We received our "Contingent Letter of Approval" and it is asking for us to pay $200 in to the "Residential Recovery Fund" if we will be residential contractors. What constitutes "Residential" work? We often do work on Apartment complexes and multi-family homes.

A: If you are signing contracts with Homeowners, you are considered a Residential Contractor. If you will not be signing contracts with Homeowners in Nevada, you should sign the Affidavit for Non-Residential Contractor form, and the $200 is not required.

While knowledge is power, knowing where to go for the answers is half the battle. REPORTING WORK RELATED INJURY AND ILLNESS

INTRODUCTION

Even with all the safe work practices and training available in the workplace, injuries and illnesses still happen. When an injury or illness happens, an employee needs to report it to their supervisor immediately or as soon as possible if circumstances prevent the employee from reporting it immediately.

TYPES OF INJURES AND ILLNESSES THAT NEED TO BE REPORTED

When an employee is hurt or gets sick in their line of work, no matter how minor, they should report it immediately to their supervisor or designated person under their company's policy. Examples of injuries and illness that should be reported include:

Injuries

- Any minor injury that requires a band aid
 - This is due to the threat of cuts getting infected or any other types of exposure to bloodborne pathogens.
- Biological exposures such as needle sticks or any other contact made with blood or other bodily fluids
- Severe lacerations or punctures that require stitches
- Sprains
- Broken bones
- Amputations
- Injuries involving hospital treatment, ambulance transport or time away from work
- Injuries resulting from the exposure to chemicals

Illness

- Chemical poisoning
- Temperature related illness
- Noise-Induced Hearing Loss (NIHL)
- Occupational Dermatitis
- Occupational Asthma
- Musculoskeletal Disorders (MSD)

Note: Due to the nature of illnesses, it may take some time for symptoms to appear. Symptoms and a diagnosis should be reported as soon as possible.

Note: Employees should not self-diagnosis. If an employee starts to experience symptoms associated with an illness and they feel that it is work related, they should seek professional medical assistance.

REPORTING WORK RELATED INJURY AND ILLNESS

HOW TO REPORT

Employees should always follow their company's specific procedures for reporting injuries and illnesses that occur at work. Injuries and illnesses should be reported immediately or as soon as possible.

When reporting an injury or illness, an employee should do the following:

- Report the injury or symptoms immediately (or as soon as possible if you are seeking medical treatment) to your supervisor or designated person.
- Give details about the injury or symptoms. Details include:
 - Date
 - Time
 - Description of the work area and activities being performed
 - The names of eyewitnesses or coworkers who aided the employee
 - Symptoms (if applicable)

Note: If possible, give an estimated time of when symptoms first appeared.

- Fill out any forms that relate to the reporting of a work-related injury or illness.
 - Depending on the situation, your employer may give you a form for your medical provider or other medical professional to fill out. Return this form as soon as possible to your supervisor or designated person.
- Keep your supervisor or designated person up-to-date on any ongoing medical treatment or accommodations that you are receiving or will need.

DO NOT DELAY TREATMENT

Do not delay seeking treatment to report an injury or illness. If medical treatment is needed immediately, you should get treated and then report the injury or illness.

DO NOT HESITATE TO REPORT AN INJURY OR ILLNESS

Employees should not hesitate to report an injury or illness. Employers cannot retaliate against an employee for reporting a work-related injury or illness.

FALSE REPORTING

It is a crime for an employee to knowingly file a fraudulent workers' compensation claim. Any person who files a false workers' compensation claim is guilty of a crime and may be subject to criminal charges which may be punishable by up to (5) years in prison and/or a fine of up to $150,000.

CONCLUSION

When an injury or illness occurs at the workplace, an employee needs to report it. Even a minor injury should be reported. Some employees may think that minor things, such as a paper cut, do not need to be reported; after all they can just put a band aid on it and return to work. However, employees need to remember that even paper cuts can get infected. Both you and your supervisor want you to be able to work and part of that includes getting injuries and illnesses treated and reported.
