

Capitol Connection Q&A for Contractors
By Shauna Krause, President, Capitol Services, Inc.

To be, or “B-2” is the question now, and we have the answers! Complex regulations are the rule as two contractors who are less confident about RME’s get my expert help in knowing for sure where the boundaries are in CA...

Exciting news! On June 1, the Contractors State License Board (CSLB) will begin accepting applications for the new B-2 Residential Remodeling Classification. This classification is available to licensees and applicants whose principal contracting business involves working on existing homes with residential wood frame structures which require at least three unrelated trades or crafts for a single contract.

Please note that the “B-2” license classification has the following restrictions:

- Limited to working on existing residential wood frame structures
- Cannot make structural alterations to load-bearing partitions and walls
- Cannot install or extend electrical or plumbing systems but can make modifications to existing systems (e.g., install recessed lighting or alter plumbing for two shower heads).
- Cannot install or replace an HVAC system

Please call us with any questions regarding this exciting new classification.

Q: You just recently assisted us with obtaining a new “A” license for my Limited Liability Company (LLC) with one of my employees as the RME (Responsible Managing Employee). I want to sit for the exams as well, but since the CSLB only allows a person to have one application in process at a time, we had to complete one process at a time. I’m wondering if it’s best for me to replace him on the license that was just issued or go get a separate license. Does the license belong to the LLC or to the individual?

A: The license belongs to the entity, in your case, the LLC.

Q: We have a Corporate license with several employees acting as RME’s. We are going to be starting a new company and moving employees around. Before we get too far into the deal, I wanted to confirm whether the CSLB still requires RME’s to work 32 hours a week? Also, in the event we move them from one license to the other, how long does the “old Company’s” license stay in place?

A: Yes, RME’s are still required to work at least 32 hours a week, or 80% of the Company’s operating time. The “old Company’s” license will remain in place until you request that it be cancelled, however it will go suspended if you do not replace the Qualifier’s within 90 days of them Disassociating from the license.

While knowledge is power, knowing where to go for the answers is half the battle. DEFENSIVE DRIVING PRACTICES

INTRODUCTION

Every driver has heard of defensive driving. Defensive driving is important because drivers have to factor in other drivers, weather conditions, and other hazards to avoid accidents. Employees who drive may not be able to control the driving behaviors of other people on the road; however, they can control their own actions. By following some common defensive driving practices, employees who drive can help protect themselves and others while out on the road.

LOOK AHEAD

Looking ahead is important for defensive driving because it allows the driver to be aware of what is ahead of them. Many drivers might think that looking ahead means just looking at the vehicle in front of them, but that is not the case. Looking ahead includes:

- Glancing at your intended lane of travel continuously while driving.
- Looking at the spot where your vehicle will be in 15 seconds or longer. In inclement weather, drivers should add more seconds on to their initial 15-20 seconds depending on road conditions.
- Watching the vehicle not only in front of you, but the vehicles that are driving in front of that vehicle. The vehicles that are further ahead will impact how the drivers behind them will act.
- Looking at traffic that are in the other lanes that are ahead of you.

BE AWARE OF YOUR SURROUNDINGS

Whether a driver is on a country road or in the middle of big city traffic, they should always be aware of their surroundings. It only takes a few seconds for things to change. Being aware of your surroundings includes:

- Locating motorcycles or bicycles that may be to the side, in front of, or behind your vehicle. Locating these riders is important because they have an easier time moving around traffic than other vehicles. Ensuring that you give all motorcycles and bicycles sufficient space to avoid accidental collision.
- Identifying the location of pedestrians. Watching pedestrians is important because they may have not seen your vehicle when crossing a street or jogging on the side of the road.
- Noting and preparing for changes in the speed limit.
- Accounting for the stopping time and loads of other drivers. Put some extra distance between your vehicle and those vehicles that have trailers or other items, such as boats, attached to the rear. These items may come loose and detach during travel.

DEFENSIVE DRIVING PRACTICES

SCANNING THE AREA AROUND YOUR VEHICLE

Driving is not like other activities where you can allow your eyes to stare at the same point for a long amount of time. Drivers should move their eyes around every few seconds to help them maintain focus on all areas around them and avoid traps such as falling asleep or becoming complacent due to the scenery. Scanning the area includes:

- Continuously looking to the front, rear, and sides of your vehicle.
- Checking your mirrors every few seconds. Your mirrors play an important part of informing you of where other vehicles and pedestrians are located.
- Keeping distractions like cell phones, laptops, tablets, etc. stored during travel. Your eyes are meant to be scanning the area around your vehicle for hazards. They can't do that if you are looking at a screen.

PREPARE FOR "WHAT IF'S" AND EMERGENICES

Similar to having a prepared route for escaping a building, drivers should ensure that they prepare for a way to change or get out of lanes in case a hazard or other emergency happens. Preparing for such scenarios includes:

- Leaving a sufficient amount of space between you and other vehicles. The more amount of space between you and another vehicle, the better.
- Leaving one lane to the side of your vehicle open for swerving or exiting.
- Watching and predicting the behaviors of other drivers.
- Avoiding "herds" of vehicles.

ALERT OTHER DRIVERS TO YOUR PRESENCE

Having other drivers being alert to your presence is important because if they can see you, you can see them, and everyone avoids an accident. You can alert others to your presence by:

- Staying out of other driver's blind spots.
- Making eye contact with other drivers.
- Using your signals when changing lanes and making turns.
- Using your headlights when conditions are dark or in inclement weather.
- Ensuring that your brake lights are in working order. Other drivers cannot brake for you if they do not know that you are braking.
- Use your horn to warn others that you are backing up or to get their attention. Do NOT use your horn to express anger.

CONCLUSION

Driving is always going to be a hazardous task. Employees can help protect themselves and others from accidents by practicing defensive driving. Defensive driving is not difficult to learn, and it has long-term benefits. The defensive driving practices provided in this lesson can help protect employees both at home and on the job.
