

Capitol Connection Q&A for Contractors
By Shauna Krause, President, Capitol Services, Inc.

Let's jet! An interesting question will require an additional expert in creating this 'structure' change. A sudden loss will prompt a need for change in license status. While it's not good advice to argue with the law, sometimes it's a 'singular' point to be made...

Q: If a company water jets a septic/sewage line, is a Contractor's License required?

A: As long as there are no alterations or repairs done to the sewer line it is acceptable to hydro jet lines without a Contractor's license.

Q: If we want to change from an 'S' Corp to a 'C' Corp, what would that entail? Can we keep the same Contractor's License number?

A: The CSLB doesn't concern themselves with whether you are 'S' or a 'C' corp. While we do handle corporate registrations with the Secretary of State, we also don't get involved in whether you are 'S' or 'C' corp. It is my understanding that it's a tax election so each files taxes differently. The corporation stays intact therefore the Contractor's License would as well. From my brief research, you can change your filing status at any time but if you want it effective for a particular year, you must revoke your 'S' election by the 15th day of the 3rd month of that tax year. Not a tax expert, you'll want to contact a CPA for more information on corporate tax structure.

Q: My husband recently passed away and he had an active Contractor's License. I'm not even sure when it's up for renewal but I don't want to keep paying for it so is there a way to cancel it?

A: Sorry to hear about your loss. Yes, there is a license cancellation request form that you can complete. Since your husband is the only one with signing authority on the license, you would need to sign it and submit with a Death Certificate. I looked up the license and it expires at the end of this year. The CSLB doesn't automatically charge you so you really aren't paying for anything at this point. You may decide rather than bother with the cancellation, just let it expire. I'm sure you have enough on your plate anyway.

Q: I am an Oregon contractor and I started a business years ago that is highly specialized. I have called the CSLB several times and I've been told I need a "C-8" Concrete license, or a "C-61"/"D-12" (Synthetic Products) license. I don't agree with either of those. I believe the "C-61"/"D-64" (Non-Specialized) would be more appropriate. How do I go about obtaining that license being that it doesn't really have a "title"?

A: Anytime anyone applies for a "D-64" license, the CSLB requires that they answer four questions: 1. What are you performing, installing, replacing, and/or repairing? 2. How is it being performed, installed, replaced, and/or repaired? 3. What materials, tools, and/or equipment are being used? 4. What does the contract say you will do for the customer? Or, what is the scope of work to be performed?

Based on the answers to these, the CSLB will determine the appropriate classification and if they determine the "D-64", they will assign it a "title" specific to the type of work you are doing.

Custom Concrete Work & Backhoe Services

INTRODUCTION

Any type of work on a roof can be extremely dangerous, because there are several things that could go wrong at any time. In order to stay safe, it is important to always use common sense and never be sloppy when you work on roofs.

HAZARDS

There are many hazards that go with roofing, such as:

- Falling off the roof, a ladder, or through holes or skylights
- Slipping
- Materials and tools falling on someone
- Impalement
- Heat illness: It can get up to 117 degrees on a roof
- Burns from tar and asphalt

PREPARATION

Before you start work on a roof, be sure that you:

- Know what kind of roof you are going to work on
- Know where any skylights or holes are and use the proper fall protection
- Cover any exposed rebar with approved troughs
- Plan so you don't work alone; always use the buddy system
- Inspect all your ladders and equipment before you use them to make sure they are in proper working order

FALL PROTECTION

OSHA requires certain types of fall protection depending on the slope of the roof and the height of the roof. Therefore, even if the roof isn't extremely high, the slope of the roof may make it so you still need fall protection. Check your company's fall protection plan to see what kind of fall protection you need and follow the required specifications. No matter what type of fall protection you use, always remember to inspect your equipment regularly so it actually will protect you.

HANDLING TOOLS AND EQUIPMENT

- Be aware of tools and cords so you don't trip over them
- Do not leave tools lying around; put them away when you are finished using them
 - When you are not using tools, secure them with short lengths of rope or bungee cords OR
 - Put them in secured 5 gallon buckets OR

- Hang them on a roof bracket
- Consider using a tool belt so your hands are free when you are climbing a ladder or walking around the roof
- Be especially careful with power tools
 - Keep your feet firmly planted to maintain good balance
 - Wear sturdy gloves to protect yourself from vibration from the tools
 - Plug the tools into ground fault protected outlets
- Tag and set aside tools that are not working
- Always follow the specific safety procedures when using certain tools
- Never throw tools up and down to coworkers
 - Bring tools up with you in a tool belt OR
 - Set up a safe pulley system for transporting tools OR
 - Use or create special ladder hoisting/ladder rigging equipment

GENERAL TIPS

- Wear the proper clothing, including non-slip shoes while you are on the roof
- If you encounter asbestos, stop work immediately and tell your supervisor
- Do not work in bad weather; wind, rain, lightning, snow, and hail are especially dangerous when on a rooftop
- Be careful where you step
- Do not engage in horseplay
- Stay away from electrical power lines if possible

CONCLUSION

According to a report by the US Bureau of Labor Statistics in 2009, roofing is the 5th most dangerous occupation in the country. However, you can protect yourself and your coworkers by using common sense and always following safety procedures.
