

By Shauna Krause, President, Capitol Services, Inc.

There is no 'blanket' answer to cover all the rules as some contractors are 'exceptional' as we learn from our first inquiry. I will also dig deep into a question on 'splitting off' a special class in 'general' terms and I have a happy surprise for a stressed-out question involving a list of license classes that sounds like a quarterback's line call, hike! ...

Q: I am a newly established General Building Contractor and I just signed on a restoration job. I asked that the homeowners put more than the down payment typically required because they wanted special order products. I've always understood this to be acceptable, but the homeowners are telling me they won't pay more than $1,000 for a down payment. Who is correct in this situation?

A: The down payment cannot be more than $1,000 or 10 percent of the contract price, whichever is less, for a home improvement job or swimming pool, excluding finance charges. There are no exceptions for special-order materials. There is a down payment exception for about two dozen licensees who carry special bonds to protect consumers, known as blanket performance and payment bonds. These exceptions are noted on CSLB's website.

Q: I have a current license for my corporation and hold the "A" (General Engineering) and the "C-57" (Well Drilling) classifications. I want to separate out my well drilling classification, so I want to obtain a separate license with a dba attached. When I do that, do the liabilities and taxes of the new dba go to the main entity, or are they separate? Will I be required to obtain new bonds and a separate Worker's Comp policy?

A: While I'm not a CPA or attorney, since the business entity is not changing, I would assume the liabilities and taxes will all remain with the main entity, and the 'dba' business would not be taxed separately. The 'dba' is going to be issued a separate/different license number, so I can for sure tell you that a new Contractor's Bond will be required. As far as Worker's Comp, you'll want to check with your insurance company, however it should be the same policy. The CSLB will however, need a Certificate of Worker's Comp with the full business name, including the 'dba', on file. Let me know if you'd like our assistance with obtaining the new license.

Q: I am currently the Vice President of my 'S'-corp and the President and I are discussing a transition plan for the company. While that hasn't firmed up as to whether we do an "oldco"/"newco" scenario or transition the existing company we do need to understand my options for becoming the "Qualifier". We currently hold "B", "C-4", "C-20", "C-36", "C-42", "C-60" and the "C-43" with the President as the Qualifier, but I have been listed on the license for over ten years. What will I need to do to become the Qualifier on the existing license or qualify for the new license if that is required? I'm hoping with my experience I will only need to take the law portion but please advise.

A: Actually, if you have been listed as an Officer for over 10 years, you can apply to replace the President on the license and request a Waiver of both the law and trade exams. It's not guaranteed, but B&P Code Section 7065.1 allows for this scenario. Let me know if I can help.

CARDIOPULMONARY RESUSCITATION

INTRODUCTION

Cardiopulmonary resuscitation, or CPR, is a life-saving technique that uses chest compressions coupled with rescue breathing to restore a normal heart rhythm. Even if you are not trained in CPR, the American Heart Association recommends that you perform chest compressions in the event that CPR is necessary.

BEFORE PERFORMING CPR

- If the person appears unconscious, shake his or her shoulder and loudly ask if they are okay.
- If the person is nonresponsive:
 - If there is another person present, assign them to call 911 while you begin CPR.
 - If you are alone, call 911 before beginning CPR – unless the victim became unresponsive due to suffocation. If suffocation (drowning or choking) is involved, perform CPR for one minute before calling 911.
- If an AED is available, deliver one shock if instructed by the device before beginning CPR.

PERFORMING CPR

CPR should always be done in order of the acronym CAB: circulation, airway, and breathing.

Circulation (or compressions) – This step is crucial and even if you are not trained in CPR, the American Heart Association recommends that you at least attempt compressions, or “hands only CPR”. If you are trained in CPR, perform chest compressions before moving on to the next steps.

- The victim must be placed on his or her back on a firm surface.
- The person performing compressions will kneel next to the victim’s shoulders.
- Place the heel of your hand over the victim’s sternum, or between the nipples, and place your other hand on top of the first hand.
- Using your whole upper body weight, and while keeping your elbows straight, push straight down on the chest until it is compressed by at least 2 inches. You know you are doing this correctly if a bystander can get a pulse on the victim’s wrist that matches your compressions.
- Continue to push at a rate of 100 compressions a minute (or to the tune of “Staying Alive” by the Bee Gees).
- If you are not CPR certified, continue chest compressions until there are signs of movement or medical personnel take over. For those that are trained in CPR, continue to the next steps.

CARDIOPULMONARY RESUSCITATION

Airway – Make sure the victim's airway is clear.

- After you have performed 30 chest compressions, open the person's airway by tilting their head back and lifting their chin.
- Check for normal breathing by looking for chest movement, listening for breath sounds, and feeling for the victim's breath. If the person is not breathing normally and you are trained in CPR, begin mouth-to-mouth rescue breaths.

Breathing – Perform rescue breaths.

- If you have been trained to administer rescue breaths, rescue breaths can be administered mouth-to-mouth (or mouth-to-nose breathing in the extreme case that the mouth is seriously injured or can't be opened).
- Once the airway is open, pinch the nostrils shut in preparation for administering rescue breaths. Rescue breaths may be administered in one of the following ways:
 - via a CPR mouthpiece.
 - mouth-to-mouth (utilizing a face shield).
- Give one initial rescue breath lasting for about one second, and watch to see if the chest rises.
 - If the chest does rise, give the second rescue breath.
 - If the chest does not rise, double check that the airway is clear and give the second breath.
- Once again administer 30 chest compressions at the same rate as before, repeating the cycle.
- If an automated external defibrillator (AED) is available and the victim has not begun moving after five cycles of CPR, apply the AED and follow the prompts as instructed. After administering one shock, then resume CPR for two more minutes before administering a second shock.
- Continue CPR until there are signs of movement or emergency medical personnel take over.

CONCLUSION

It is important that if you ever find somebody whose breathing or heartbeat has stopped, that you perform CPR right away. Even if you are not trained in CPR, performing chest compressions can restore circulation and help save the victim's life.
