INTRODUCTION

Accidents occur for many reasons. Understanding why an accident happens is the first step in prevention.

- Over confidence
- Ignoring safety procedures
- Shortcuts
- Not having complete Instructions
- Poor housekeeping
- Mental distractions
- Pre-Planning

OVER CONFIDENCE:

- Having confidence is a good thing but being over confident can be dangerous.
- Thinking “it can never happen to me” is an attitude that can lead to improper procedures or methods used while working.

IGNORING SAFETY PROCEDURES:

- Failing to observe safety procedures can endanger all workers.
- Rules and procedures are in place for a reason and it's important for them to be followed.
- Having a casual attitude about safety rules leads to danger.

SHORTCUTS:

- As we try to be more efficient, we tend to take shortcuts that can lead to unsafe conditions and increased chances for injuries.
- Shortcuts should be analyzed thoroughly before implementing.

NOT HAVING COMPLETE INSTRUCTIONS:

- An employee should not be intimidated about asking for better instructions and should never try to do a task without knowing exactly how to do things correctly.
- New employee training is a must to prevent accidents.
- Assuming that everyone knows how to do his or her job correctly can lead to an accident.

POOR HOUSEKEEPING:

- A well maintained work area sets a standard for all.
- Poor housekeeping creates all types of hazards and sets the stage for accidents.
- Good housekeeping encourages pride and a safe environment.

MENTAL DISTRACTIONS:

- Doing a task safely requires mental attention.
- Distractions create hazards and can pull focus away from tasks at hand.

PRE-PLANNING:

- Thinking through a process to complete a task can take away hazards.
- Plan your work and then work your plan.

CONCLUSION:

- Make workplace safety a core value, a shared concern.
- Take proactive ownership of welfare and safety for all.
- Learn what can cause harm to whom, when and how. Near misses or no-injury accidents, as well as injuries, must be investigated.
- Identify hazards, assess risks and develop controls.
- Report ALL accidents to your supervisor.
