Something old and something new! In the many years I have assisted contractors here I still get questions we have not answered in this space. Check out our other resource at cutredtape.com to see past Q/A. I 'man' up on a question that requires many 'coats' to cover, while it's 'good news/bad news' on a contractor's revoked license...

Q: I have a question which is unrelated to the other matters you've been assisting on already. I need to update several of our JV licenses. Some of the JV licenses still have our old address listed. I found the form on the CSLB's website to update our address. Do you know who is required to sign on the address change form? Is it an Officer of either company or an Officer from each company? The form does not specify for JV's.

A: An Officer listed on either company's license can sign the form to update the address.

Q: We currently have an "A" (General Engineering) license. We were recently doing a project which included coating the interior of a manhole. We sub-contracted that portion to a specialty contractor who has the "C-42" license (Sanitation Systems), which we have done on many occasions in the past. We had another sub-Contractor on the project who told us the "C-42" Contractor should not be coating the manhole, and that a "C-33" (Painting) license was required to do that work. Is that correct?

A: Since it is acceptable for a "C-42" contractor to install and repair storm drains, and sewage disposal and drain structures, it would also be appropriate for same contractor to coat the inside of a manhole. This work is also acceptable for an "A"

(General Engineering) contractor as well. If they are using epoxy, a "D-12" (Synthetic Products) can do it and if the surface is concrete a "C-8" (Concrete) and/or "D-06" (Concrete Related Services) contractor is also appropriate. Since it is a coating, the "C-33" (Painting and Decorating) is acceptable too. So many options!

Q: I remember reading in a previous article you wrote that an individual can only have one application in process with the CSLB at a time. We have a pending application to replace our Qualifying Individual, but we also need to add a classification to our license (with a different Qualifier than the pending replacement application), and also add our newly appointed Officer to the license. Can we have all three of those applications in process at the same time, or do we need to stagger them?

A: An individual can only have one application in process at a time, but as long as each of the three applications you are referring to are three separate people, you can have all three in process at the same time.

Q: I had a Contractor's license years ago which was revoked due to an issue I had with my Professional Engineer license. The case was dropped and I just moved on to consulting so I didn't pursue re-activating either license. Now I'd like to get my Contractor's License back to Active because I believe it will be beneficial to my Consulting business to be able to advertise that I am licensed. Can you please let me know what I need to do to get my license back?

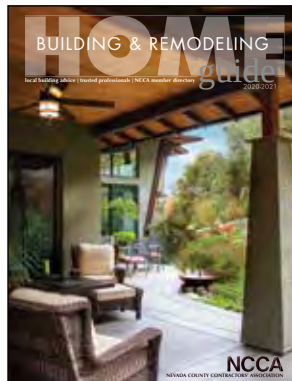

A: You will not be able to renew/reactivate your license since it was revoked. It has been well over five years since the license was Active so you will need to re-take the exams. Since your license was a Sole Owner license, you can request the number back, but essentially you will be going through the process as if it's a brand-new license.

What is "Talking in Code"?

Talking in Code is an interactive workshop with Craig Griesbach, Director of the Nevada County Building Department discussing evolving code requirements, code enforcement consistency, construction trends and much, much more. Contractors, homeowners, architects, engineers, draftsman, industry representatives and anyone involved in a construction or development project can greatly benefit from attending. These meetings are normally held every other month throughout the year.

REPORTING WORK RELATED INJURY AND ILLNESS

INTRODUCTION

Even with all the safe work practices and training available in the workplace, injuries and illnesses still happen. When an injury or illness happens, an employee needs to report it to their supervisor immediately or as soon as possible if circumstances prevent the employee from reporting it immediately.

TYPES OF INJURES AND ILLNESSES THAT NEED TO BE REPORTED

When an employee is hurt or gets sick in their line of work, no matter how minor, they should report it immediately to their supervisor or designated person under their company's policy. Examples of injuries and illness that should be reported include:

Injuries

- Any minor injury that requires a band aid
 - This is due to the threat of cuts getting infected or any other types of exposure to bloodborne pathogens.
- Biological exposures such as needle sticks or any other contact made with blood or other bodily fluids
- Severe lacerations or punctures that require stitches
- Sprains
- Broken bones
- Amputations
- Injuries involving hospital treatment, ambulance transport or time away from work
- Injuries resulting from the exposure to chemicals

Illness

- Chemical poisoning
- Temperature related illness
- Noise-Induced Hearing Loss (NIHL)
- Occupational Dermatitis
- Occupational Asthma
- Musculoskeletal Disorders (MSD)

Note: Due to the nature of illnesses, it may take some time for symptoms to appear. Symptoms and a diagnosis should be reported as soon as possible.

Note: Employees should not self-diagnosis. If an employee starts to experience symptoms associated with an illness and they feel that it is work related, they should seek professional medical assistance.

REPORTING WORK RELATED INJURY AND ILLNESS

HOW TO REPORT

Employees should always follow their company's specific procedures for reporting injuries and illnesses that occur at work. Injuries and illnesses should be reported immediately or as soon as possible.

When reporting an injury or illness, an employee should do the following:

- Report the injury or symptoms immediately (or as soon as possible if you are seeking medical treatment) to your supervisor or designated person.
- Give details about the injury or symptoms. Details include:
 - o Date
 - o Time
 - o Description of the work area and activities being performed
 - o The names of eyewitnesses or coworkers who aided the employee
 - o Symptoms (if applicable)

Note: If possible, give an estimated time of when symptoms first appeared.

- Fill out any forms that relate to the reporting of a work-related injury or illness.
 - o Depending on the situation, your employer may give you a form for your medical provider or other medical professional to fill out. Return this form as soon as possible to your supervisor or designated person.
- Keep your supervisor or designated person up-to-date on any ongoing medical treatment or accommodations that you are receiving or will need.

DO NOT DELAY TREATMENT

Do not delay seeking treatment to report an injury or illness. If medical treatment is needed immediately, you should get treated and then report the injury or illness.

DO NOT HESITATE TO REPORT AN INJURY OR ILLNESS

Employees should not hesitate to report an injury or illness. Employers cannot retaliate against an employee for reporting a work-related injury or illness.

FALSE REPORTING

It is a crime for an employee to knowingly file a fraudulent workers' compensation claim. Any person who files a false workers' compensation claim is guilty of a crime and may be subject to criminal charges which may be punishable by up to (5) years in prison and/or a fine of up to $150,000.

CONCLUSION

When an injury or illness occurs at the workplace, an employee needs to report it. Even a minor injury should be reported. Some employees may think that minor things, such as a paper cut, do not need to be reported; after all they can just put a band aid on it and return to work. However, employees need to remember that even paper cuts can get infected. Both you and your supervisor want you to be able to work and part of that includes getting injuries and illnesses treated and reported.
