

By Shauna Krause, President, Capitol Services, Inc.

Our first contractor makes the 'grade' and gets an "A" while another is looking ahead to the finish line in hope for a 'checkered' flag. An attorney who has done the right thing discovers his client has had a last minute 'change' of heart. Now what? ...

Q: I have a "C-27" (Landscaping) license. I believe I need an "A" (General Engineering) license. We do earthwork that involves much more than average landscaping work. This would be for farms, orchards, and row crops on a variety of agricultural fields.

Services include:

- Hydraulic design for conveyance pipelines and micro-drip/sprinkler irrigation systems
- Trenching
- Excavation
- Earth grading upon excavation completion
- Electrical work in association with agricultural pumping stations
- Concrete flatwork in association with pumping stations
- Welding and fabrication of steel piping in association with pumping stations
- Sometimes boring of pipelines (normally subcontracted due to permits)

Essentially the complete construction and implementation of each individual irrigation system includes a multitude of trades from design, installation and completion.

A: The CSLB places no limits on the size of an irrigation system that a "C-27" Landscaping contractor can install, however the "C-34" Pipeline classification or the "A" General would likely be required for large scale agricultural irrigation.

Q: We (meaning our corporation) are wanting to add a "C-10" (Electrical) classification to our license. We currently hold the "B" (General Building). Is there any special consideration for the time frame we already submitted for the "B" (General Building)? Or do we need to do a whole different Work Experience page for the different classification? And can we use the same Certifier, or would that raise red flags?

A: Thank you for contacting us. The CSLB will consider the time claimed, however you must show at least four years of full-time work experience doing electrical work ("C-10") within the last ten years. You can absolutely use the same certifier. The person who signs off on your experience can be anyone who has firsthand knowledge of your work background.

Q: I am an attorney and my client currently is a corporate license that we are closing down in order for them to do business in California under their Limited Liability Company (LLC). When we submitted the application for the new LLC, there was a form to fill out about whether we wanted a new license number issued or if we wanted our current license number transferred. We checked the box stating that we wanted a new license number issued. My client received the fingerprinting paperwork and now informed me that they now want to keep the same license number. Is it too late to make the request?

A: Being that fingerprinting paperwork has already been sent out, that tells me the application has been "posted". Posted means they have the basic requirements to process the application. Usually once an application has been posted you can no longer make changes to it because all the original information has been entered in their system. However, the request for license number re-issuance isn't processed until they actually issue the license, so they will likely accept your amended request for re-issuance.

Nevada County based Amvic-Pacific offers this seminar for contractors, architects, engineers and building officials interested in learning how to use ICFs (Insulating Concrete Forms) to construct the exterior shell of a residential or commercial structure.

This class will be taught in a one day split format with the morning session covering introduction, features, and benefits of ICF construction. The afternoon session covers installation of ICF, integrating other trades, below grade applications, and basic estimating and construction details.

This class will be a mix of instructor-led class room presentations and hands-on-demonstration of the basics of construction of residential and light commercial structures using insulating concrete forms (ICF) for the exterior wall system. Also covered will be instruction in using insulating concrete forms (ICF) in the construction of floors and/ or roofs.

What the Course Covers

Morning Session (8:30am-11:30am, Refreshments provided)

- Introduction to building with ICF
- Features & Benefits of ICF construction :
 - Energy-efficiency
 - Fire resistance,
 - Sound resistance
 - Durability
- Efficiency in Construction and performance
- Advantages of ICF construction with current building code
- Basic cost estimating
- Local products and services available

Afternoon Session: (11:30am-4:30pm, Lunch will be provided)

- Tools required for installation
- Footing types and preparation
- Basics of block installation and assembly
- Rebar placement & installation
- Window and door installation
- Top plate/sill & truss/rafter attachment
- Bracing and pouring ICF walls
- Forming & pouring elevated concrete floors/roofs using ICF
- Utility installation: electrical & plumbing
- Below grade installation and waterproofing
- Multi-story applications
- Wall claddings (drywall, stucco, siding, etc.)

Here's what one participant had to say:

"We completed our first pour a week or so back and I'm happy to say it was a great success. As you know I am an owner builder with little background in construction. Thanks to your very thorough workshop and excellent step-by-step supporting materials in addition to your personal support of our project we have been able to take on the construction of our 2 story, 2600 sq foot home. Apart from help on the day of the pour itself, my wife and I did all the ICF block work ourselves. There was a learning curve, but we were patient, paid attention to your good advice, and lo and behold it can all be done with two novices! We think the key to avoiding mishaps was simply following the recommended process and lessons learned from your training."

ACCIDENT/INCIDENT INVESTIGATION

INTRODUCTION

Accidents and incidents can happen in any workplace at any time. After an accident or incident occurs, an investigation into the accident or incident should be conducted. An investigation is not conducted to place blame, but rather to find the root causes of the accident or incident and for corrective actions to be created and implemented.

WHEN SHOULD AN ACCIDENT OR INCIDENT BE INVESTIGATED?

An accident or incident should be investigated when there is a near miss (a case where an injury did not occur, but if something had been different an employee could have been injured) or when there is an injury or illness.

An investigation should start immediately after the accident or incident occurs; however, if it cannot be immediately investigated, the investigation should start no later than 24 hours after the accident or incident.

WHO IS ON THE INVESTIGATION TEAM?

An investigation team will usually be comprised of:

- Safety officers
- Management
- Supervisors
- Employees
- Outside accident/incident investigation officers

HOW SHOULD AN INVESTIGATION BE CONDUCTED?

When investigating an accident or incident, employees should do the following steps:

- Arrange for rescue or first aid
- Keep employees calm
- Preserve the scene and evidence of the accident or incident
- Contact your supervisor or manager
- Take notes on the scene of the accident or incident
 - Notes can include sketches, photos, diagrams, etc.
 - Notes should include factors like environment, behavior, and equipment
- Conduct interviews with the victim, eyewitnesses, witnesses, and other employees who are knowledgeable about the area or task
- Look at documentation including maintenance logs, training logs, schedules, safety procedures, etc.
- Analyze the data
- Create and submit a report
 - The report should include recommended corrective actions
- Implement corrective actions
- Follow-up on corrective actions

HOW SHOULD EMPLOYEES PRESERVE THE SCENE?

After an accident or incident has occurred, the scene should not be disturbed. To preserve the scene, employees should do the following:

- Tape, isolate, or cone off the area.
- Do NOT touch or remove the evidence at the scene. Unless someone is in immediate danger, items should remain as they are until the investigation team has given the OK for cleanup.
- Take photos or draw sketches of the scene.

HOW SHOULD INTERVIEWS BE CONDUCTED?

When conducting interviews, employees should do the following:

- Conduct the interview in a private place.
- Inform the employee that they can have an employee representative present if one is available and it is appropriate for the interview.
- Inform the employee that the interview is not to place blame, but to get the facts and find the root cause so that future accidents can be avoided.
- Take notes or use a recorder during the interview. If you use a recording device, remember to get the interviewee's consent before using it.
- Listen and do not interrupt the employee while they explain what they know about the accident or incident. Offer a blank piece of paper or sketch pad to the employee to use as a reference.
- Ask clarifying questions to fill in any missing information.
- Repeat back to the interviewee the factual information and correct any inconsistencies.
- Ask the employee what they think could have prevented the accident or incident.

LOOKING OVER DOCUMENTATION

Before or after interviews, the investigation team should look at all relevant documents associated with the accident or incident. Such documents include:

- Maintenance logs or records
- Training logs or records
- Schedules
- Safety procedures

WRITING THE REPORT

When writing the report, employees should use the information gathered to identify all root and secondary causes of the accident or incident to create corrective action recommendations. The corrective actions should be unique to the accident or incident with a reasonable time frame of implementation.

CONCLUSION

Accident or incidents that occur need to be investigated. Investigations are not to be used to place blame, but rather to find and eliminate the root cause of the accident or incident. These investigations are a team effort and it is a process that should not be rushed.
