

Capitol Connection Q&A for Contractors
By Shauna Krause, President, Capitol Services, Inc.

Week of 2/15/2021

Has the name been changed to protect the 'entity'? Change is both hard and easy, depending on how, and another contractor is asking a 'pointed' question since he's just passing through...

Q: You are currently helping us with obtaining a Contractor's license in California. If the ownership of the business changes, is the Contractor's license considered to be part of the business?

A: It really just depends on how the ownership changes. If you are referring to selling the business, whether the Contractor's license remains with the business depends on if it's an asset sale or a stock sale. In an asset sale, the new entity would be required to obtain a new Contractor's license. With a stock sale, the license remains in place. If you are referring to transferring ownership from one individual to another, the license remains in place. The CSLB doesn't necessarily concern themselves with ownership, except for the percentage of ownership the Qualifying Individual holds.

Q: Is a bankruptcy a reason to deny an application for a Contractor's License?

A: A bankruptcy is not alone a reason for denial of a Contractor's License. It depends on the particular situation. The CSLB has the potential to deny a license due to unsatisfied judgements, liens, etc. in relation to a Construction project, or if a Company or individual on the license application has outstanding liabilities in relation to taxes or fees owed to State agencies.

Q: I understand that all of our officers will need to get fingerprinted to obtain a CA Contractor's license. You had previously told us it would best for them to get fingerprinted in CA via live scan in order to prevent any delays in the processing time. Our two officers will be driving through California next week. Is there a way to get the paperwork they need prior to submitting the application, or do they have to wait until we submit the signed application paperwork?

A: No, they cannot get fingerprinted ahead of receiving the appropriate paperwork from the CSLB, which will not come until the signed application is submitted.

Q: We want to change our business name on our Contractor's License. What is the process with the CSLB?

A: If your Company is a Corporation or an LLC, you will first be required to change the Business name with the CA Secretary of State. With the CSLB, you are required to file an Application to Change Business Name and/or Address. Be sure it's signed by a current member of the license's personnel and be sure the new Business name does not conflict with the type of business or the classification the license holds.

TREATED WOOD WASTE UPDATE & VARIANCE INFORMATION

Department of Toxic Substances Control (DTSC) has released information on handling Treated Wood Waste (TWW). DTSC has developed a variance process that allows Waste Management Companies, generators and haulers to dispose of TWW. Details on each of the five variance types are provided as well as questions that will be asked in order to apply for a variance. This will help prospective variance applicants to determine the type of variance they need so they can begin gathering information needed to apply.

Contractors fall into the variance type three, Transporter. This type of variance is for applicants who transport treated wood directly from the generator to the disposal facility. The transporter must not have a fixed location where they accumulate or consolidate the waste. DTSC expects this type of variance to commonly apply to contractors that perform residential work that generates TWW and other firms engaged specifically in waste hauling and transportation.

Note: Residents that hire a contractor to work on their home (e.g., fence repair or deck replacement) do not require a TWW variance provided that the contractor transports the TWW for disposal. Residents can transport up to 50 pounds of TWW to a household hazardous waste facility, but other forms of transport will require that they obtain a variance or follow hazardous waste transportation rules. The contractor that transports TWW from a residential property will require a TWW variance

DTSC will be accepting applications for the various variances outlined on their website starting February 16th. They will be using an on-line Microsoft application process, and the reimbursement of costs can be paid on-line via credit card or check. They anticipate approximately a two-week turnaround for the official variance.

Additional information can be found on DTSC's website (<https://dtsc.ca.gov/treated-wood-waste-variances/>) about applying for a variance for treated wood waste (TWW) management.

In addition, we are following closely AB 332, which is the bi-partisan legislative vehicle that we are pursuing to provide a statutory fix. AB 332 Hazardous waste: treated wood waste: management standards was introduced on January 27 as an Environmental Safety and Toxic Materials Committee bill with an urgency clause. The bill in its current form is a "placeholder" to get things rolling. It must remain in print 30 days after being introduced. I believe that it will be heard on April 7. The legislature will move this bill (urgency thus requiring 2/3rds vote) quickly, so the bigger push is with the governor's office to avoid a repeat from last year. Unfortunately, the gov's office is in a bunker-mode right now, but our California Building Alliances (CBA) that we are a part of, will get a hold staff to advocate our concerns.

We will keep you updated on any new information that we receive and welcome you calls if you need help applying for a variance.

INTRODUCTION

Safe tree removal requires the application of many safety rules to protect yourself from the many hazards involved. Employees are to attend training to have a thorough understanding of this task before attempting and take all necessary precautions while working.

POTENTIAL RISKS

- Electricity hazards
- Swinging or falling limbs
- Faulty equipment
- Poor Footing
- Excessive noise
- Hidden tree defects
- Stinging insects or animals

PRE WORK INSPECTION

Before starting this task you should make sure you are prepared to perform it safely.

- Inspect the property for any potential hazards and review all hazards found with members of the crew before starting a job.
- An experienced employee should inspect any tree that is to be climbed for rotted roots, cankers, weak crotches, dead branches, stinging insects, hangers and utility wires.
- Make sure that you have all personal protective equipment and climbing gear necessary.
 - Protective equipment may include gloves, safety glasses, hard hats, hearing protection, and anything else recommended by the manufacturer for mechanical equipment used.

SAFE WORK PRACTICES

All employees must observe the following safety rules when removing trees:

- If possible, contact the utility company before starting to discuss de-energizing and grounding or shielding of power lines.
- Assume that all power lines are energized and use extreme caution when moving ladders and equipment around downed trees and power lines.

- All tree trimming or removal within ten feet of a power line must be done only by trained and experienced line-clearance tree trimmers. In these situations, a second tree trimmer is required within normal voice communication range.
 - Line-clearance tree trimmers must be aware of and maintain the proper minimum approach distances when working around energized power lines.
- Do not trim trees in dangerous weather conditions.
- Employees who use chain saws or other equipment should be properly trained and all equipment must be properly maintained.
- An experienced employee should determine the tree's falling direction, address any leaning issues involved, and plan a retreat path to a safe location.
- Do not climb trees or ladders with tools in your hands.
- If broken trees are under pressure, determine the direction of the pressure and make small cuts to release it.
- Use care when felling a tree that has partially fallen and is lodged against another tree.
- Never turn your back on a falling tree.
- Stay alert and avoid rocks or splinters that may be thrown back by a tree as it falls.
- When removing branches or portions of a tree trunk, make sure to use proper body mechanics.

CONCLUSION

Safe tree trimming and removal is dependent taking all of the necessary safety precautions. Wearing the required personal protective equipment, performing pre-work inspections, and observing all applicable safety rules will greatly decrease the chance of damage or injury.
